

The big loophole to this is, they never intend to send a second "spam" or e-mail so, making them put a "removal method" on the e-mail after the first time is irrelevant. They shouldn't have sent it in the first place.

If I put a "No solicitation" sign on my front door, does that mean after the first time? I don't see this as being effective at all.